A translator's view
Pastor Peter Marokiki is translating Psalm 25 into the Arop language. His computer screen is small, but it shows him his translation and several other translations he's using for reference.

Pastor Peter and the rest of the Arop translation team (including me!) must stay ahead of the other translators so the Arop translation can be the starting point for the translations in their languages. That's why Peter is working on Psalms while the other translators are finishing Acts.

The translators have all gone home and will return to Arop in March for the next translation workshop. Pray that the Lord would fill each translator with a love for the Lord and His Word, and that their witness will influence many in their home villages to read and respond to their translations of Luke.

Bonnie and I have finally turned in what may be the final draft of our book! Pray it will be published soon, and that the Lord will be glorified through it.

Coming soon, Lord willing:

Sunday Feb. 12 Visit Arlington Countryside Church in Arlington Heights, IL.

Mon.-Weds. Feb. 13-15 At Wheaton College missions conference.

Soon, maybe: We may change the name of this weekly update, which I rarely manage to publish on Friday, to Arop Lagoon Tribune, a name that only gets used once or twice a year for a print publication. Let me know if you have an opinion.
